FOREWORD

Big business means many things to many people. For our nation, it is the hub of free enterprise, and opportunity for all free men to prosper. To some acquisitive souls, it means monopolizing wealth and the means of producing wealth. There are countless facets to big business, each one revealing a different means to an end.

To the high school senior, big business means the essential task of organizing himself for a place in the sun as a sound-minded individual who will add his work, his character, and his youthful gallantry which will promote progress and civilization in the universe.

DEDICATION

Our generation finds itself in a world of doubt, a world in which the light of truth is often dim or indiscernible. Brighteyed, carefree youth, the hope of our nation, is plunged suddenly into a maelstrom of movement, of struggle for existence, of idealism expressed with a weapon.

Man is faced, uniquely in history, with the possibility of controlling his environment to an extent hitherto possessed only by his Creator. Through the course of centuries, man's intellectual rise has prepared him for a dynamic life of unity, with material and spiritual advance. But his violent nature has forced him to destroy the work of his mind and his hands, thus dissipating his miracles of technology in ceaseless warfare. The time has come for us to look to something higher than man for guidance; though the intellect has been present, purpose has been lacking.

With the help of Almighty God, we, the children of democracy, must strive to find for ourselves the true, unperturbed set of values, to preserve these standards, and to build a world of right and truth in which the next generation will be able to lift up its head and look to the sky. We, the Graduating Class of June, 1953, hereby dedicate ourselves to this task.

From Our General Manager

To the Class of June 1953:

According to Herodotus, it required 100,000 men working for 20 years (2,000,000 man-years) to build the Great Pyramid. In our own times, the Hoover Dam, a much more complicated structure containing practically the same volume of material, required the labor of 1200 men for two years (2400 man-years). Thus, the American worker was able to produce 800 times as much in a given time as the Egyptian worker of 5000 years ago.

The reason for this almost incredible increase in productive power lies in the great advances made in science, invention, and technical methods. And we have not yet reached the limits of productivity, for the new science of Cybernetics is well on its way to producing calculators, machines, and devices which will operate other machines now operated by human power.

Consequently, the danger of man's becoming just a more intelligent machine, producing and working with other machines, is not a mere figment of the science fiction writer's imagination. This grave danger of mechanizing man can be offset only in one way, and that is by a conscious and determined effort on man's part to develop along humanistic lines.

If man is to rise and to keep rising above the machine, he must develop in two directions.

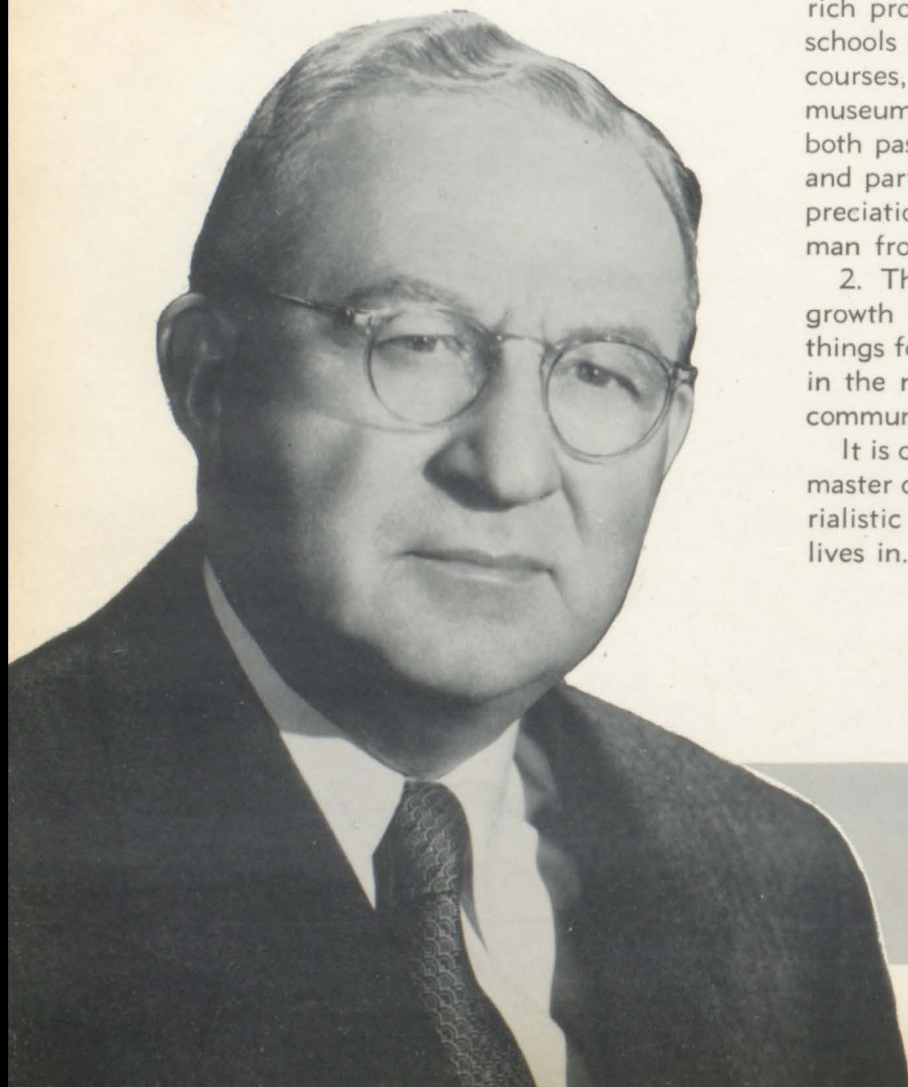

1. He must develop his intellectual, his appreciative, and his cultural powers. These areas of learning and appreciation must not remain the exclusive province of the few but must become the prized interests of the many. In the metropolitan area, the opportunities for such learnings and appreciations are offered in rich profusion — in adult schools, university schools of general studies, art schools, lecture courses, concerts, operas, art exhibits, and museums. All of these offer opportunities for both passive and active appreciation, learning and participation in the finer things—an appreciation and participation which differentiate man from both the animal and the machine.

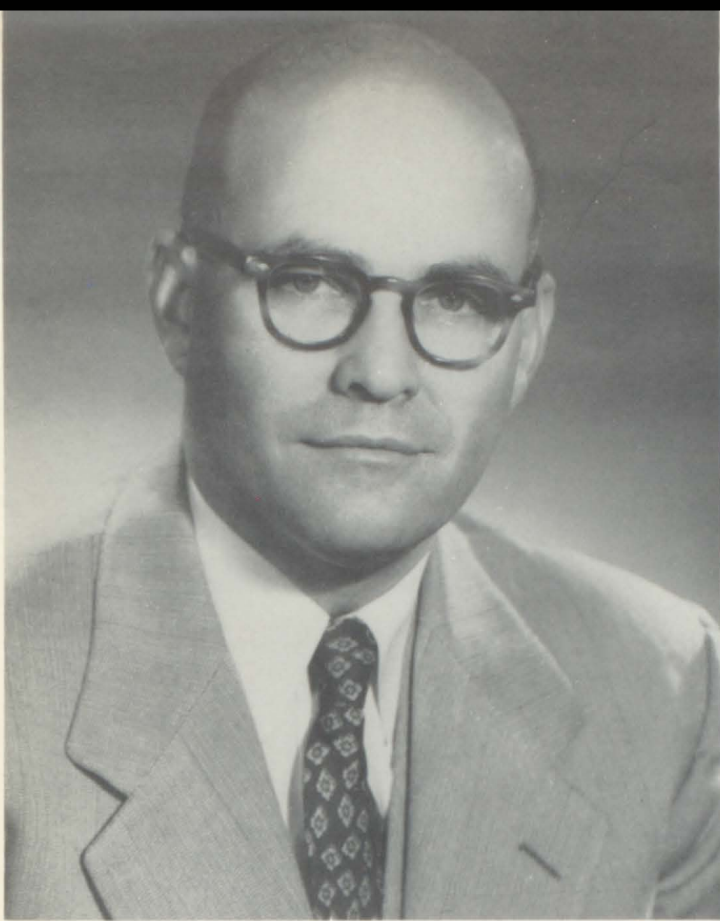

2. The second line of development and growth lies along the path of doing humane things for one's fellows in the local community, in the national community, and in the world community.

It is only so that man can continue to be the master of the machine, the master of his materialistic self, and the master of the world he lives in.

Senior Blues

SANDRA MAYER
DOROTHY GERMANSKY

Four long years have finally passed,
Graduation nears at last,
I've looked forward to it for so long,
With me dwells the procession song.
Now as time grows very short,
I hear a tune of a different sort,
It's a medley filled with sorrow
Carrying grave thoughts of tomorrow.
My heart is filled with so much sadness
As I depart from these years of gladness;
If only I could relive the past,
When I ranked as a freshman in my class!
It was then that I envied the Senior "A"
As he approached Graduation Day.

One Hand Washes The Other

NANCY SELENFREUND
HANNAH BESUNDER

The diamond mines are prospering,
Thanks to the Wigwam on the hill;
With engagement parties flourishing,
Jewelers are filling up the till.

The platinum smiths are gathering gelt,
They set the rings you know,
Their wives are sporting pretty mink pelts
Thanks to our braves' dough.

The watchmakers are busy,
(Pre-engagement gifts I'd say)
The squaws are growing dizzy,
The braves are growing gray.

The glass and tinsmiths aren't working,
The five and dimes feel sad,
Our Indians aren't shirking
They want the best there is to be had.

But the diamond mines are prospering,
I guess they always will,
The young squaws love their diamond rings
And the jeweler likes his till.

Inventory Report

On September 9, 1949, the State of Confusion issued a temporary charter, expiring on June 17, 1953, to "Productions Unlimited," otherwise known as the Class of June '53. A. Walter Ackerman, Vice Chairman of the Board of the Weequahic Holding Company, welcomed us into the firm, proclaiming that a merger of the elementary businesses would be most profitable to us. New methods of management and production were taught us by efficiency experts of the company.

Having lost our Hawthorne Avenue lease, we merged with our Madisonian affiliates at a new plant located on Chancellor Avenue, in accordance with our American motto "Keep Moving."

On September of 1950, our transfer to the new quarters was marked by a ceremony under the direction of Dr. Max J Herzberg, then Chairman of the Board of the Weequahic Holding Company. Mr. William B. Mayer was appointed personnel manager of our firm.

We were awed by the senior members of the holding company who considered us inefficient and inexperienced. Our semi-annual stock-gradings showed varied fluctuations in many cases. But by June, '51, our surroundings were no longer new to us; and we went about our work in a business-like manner. In this same month, the main office on Green Street announced the retirement of our esteemed Chairman of the Board, Dr. Max J. Herzberg, from the Weequahic Holding Company.

That summer, we were occupied with the question of who would fill the vacancy. It was at this time many of our colleagues were forced to gain better merchandising methods at the South Side Extension.

In September, 1951, Dr. Michael A. Conovitz was installed as the new Chairman of the Weequahic Holding Company, whose trustees approved a measure for the creation of a directory commission for Productions Unlimited. Accordingly, elections were held, and Elliot Leen was elected to the Presidency, Heywood Girion the Veep, Marvin Feldman the Secretary, and Stanley Wolfe, Treasurer.

Under the guidance of Dr. Conovitz, we felt certain that business would continue to expand as it had done under Dr. Herzberg, while our stocks rose and dividends grew larger and larger.

During February of 1952, elections were held at Productions Unlimited. James Keefe was elected as the new President, Deborah Gersten was elected as the new Secretary, and the other officers were re-elected to their respective positions.

On the evenings of May 23 and May 24, "Out of the Frying Pan," a comedy in three acts by Francis Swann, was performed by the company's dramatic group under the able direction of Mr. Frank A. DeLisi and silent partner Stanislavsky (1863-1938). On a typical day during this era, the plant was cleared of its personnel when a rival firm tried to sabotage the building. However, this "bull market" was found to be false, and business returned to normalcy.

Towards the end of this period, Productions Unlimited held their company outing at Echo Lake Park.

During September of 1952, Productions Unlimited commenced work on "Operation Be Bop Hop," under the direction of its officers, President Heywood Girion, Vice President Stanley Wolfe, Secretary Deborah Gersten, and Treasurer Sanford Grossman, who had been elected to their offices during that month. The above-mentioned operation was executed on the evening of December 20, 1952, to the joy of all who attended the event.

Shortly afterwards, we received our semi-annual dividend reports, and, too late realized that our last opportunity for higher interest rates had passed us by.

Knowing that our charter would soon expire, we proceeded to formulate our final report for the four fiscal years. As we prepared to close all transactions, an election for the company's directory commission was held in which most of the incumbents were re-elected. Theodore Smith received the Veep-hood.

As the expiration date approached, company committees made preparations for the final banquet, scheduled at the Military Park Hotel on June 13, 1953.

With the beginning of June, we had already filed the company's records, and were ready to vacate the Weequahic Holding Company premises.

On June 17, 1953, Productions Unlimited was formally dissolved in the corporation's huge auditorium, and each member of the company received a life-time annuity in the Weequahic Holding Company, with a permanent endorsement clause attached.

A New World

Now that our company lease has expired,
The employees must seek new positions;
Only the future can see the results,
In doctors, lawyers, musicians.

Latent talents will come to the surface,
And Broadway stars appear;
There may be just one lucky person
To inherit a million each year.

From our group may arise a Da Vinci,
Or perhaps another Einstein,
Some probably will go on to be teachers,
Else will star on the New York Yanks' nine.

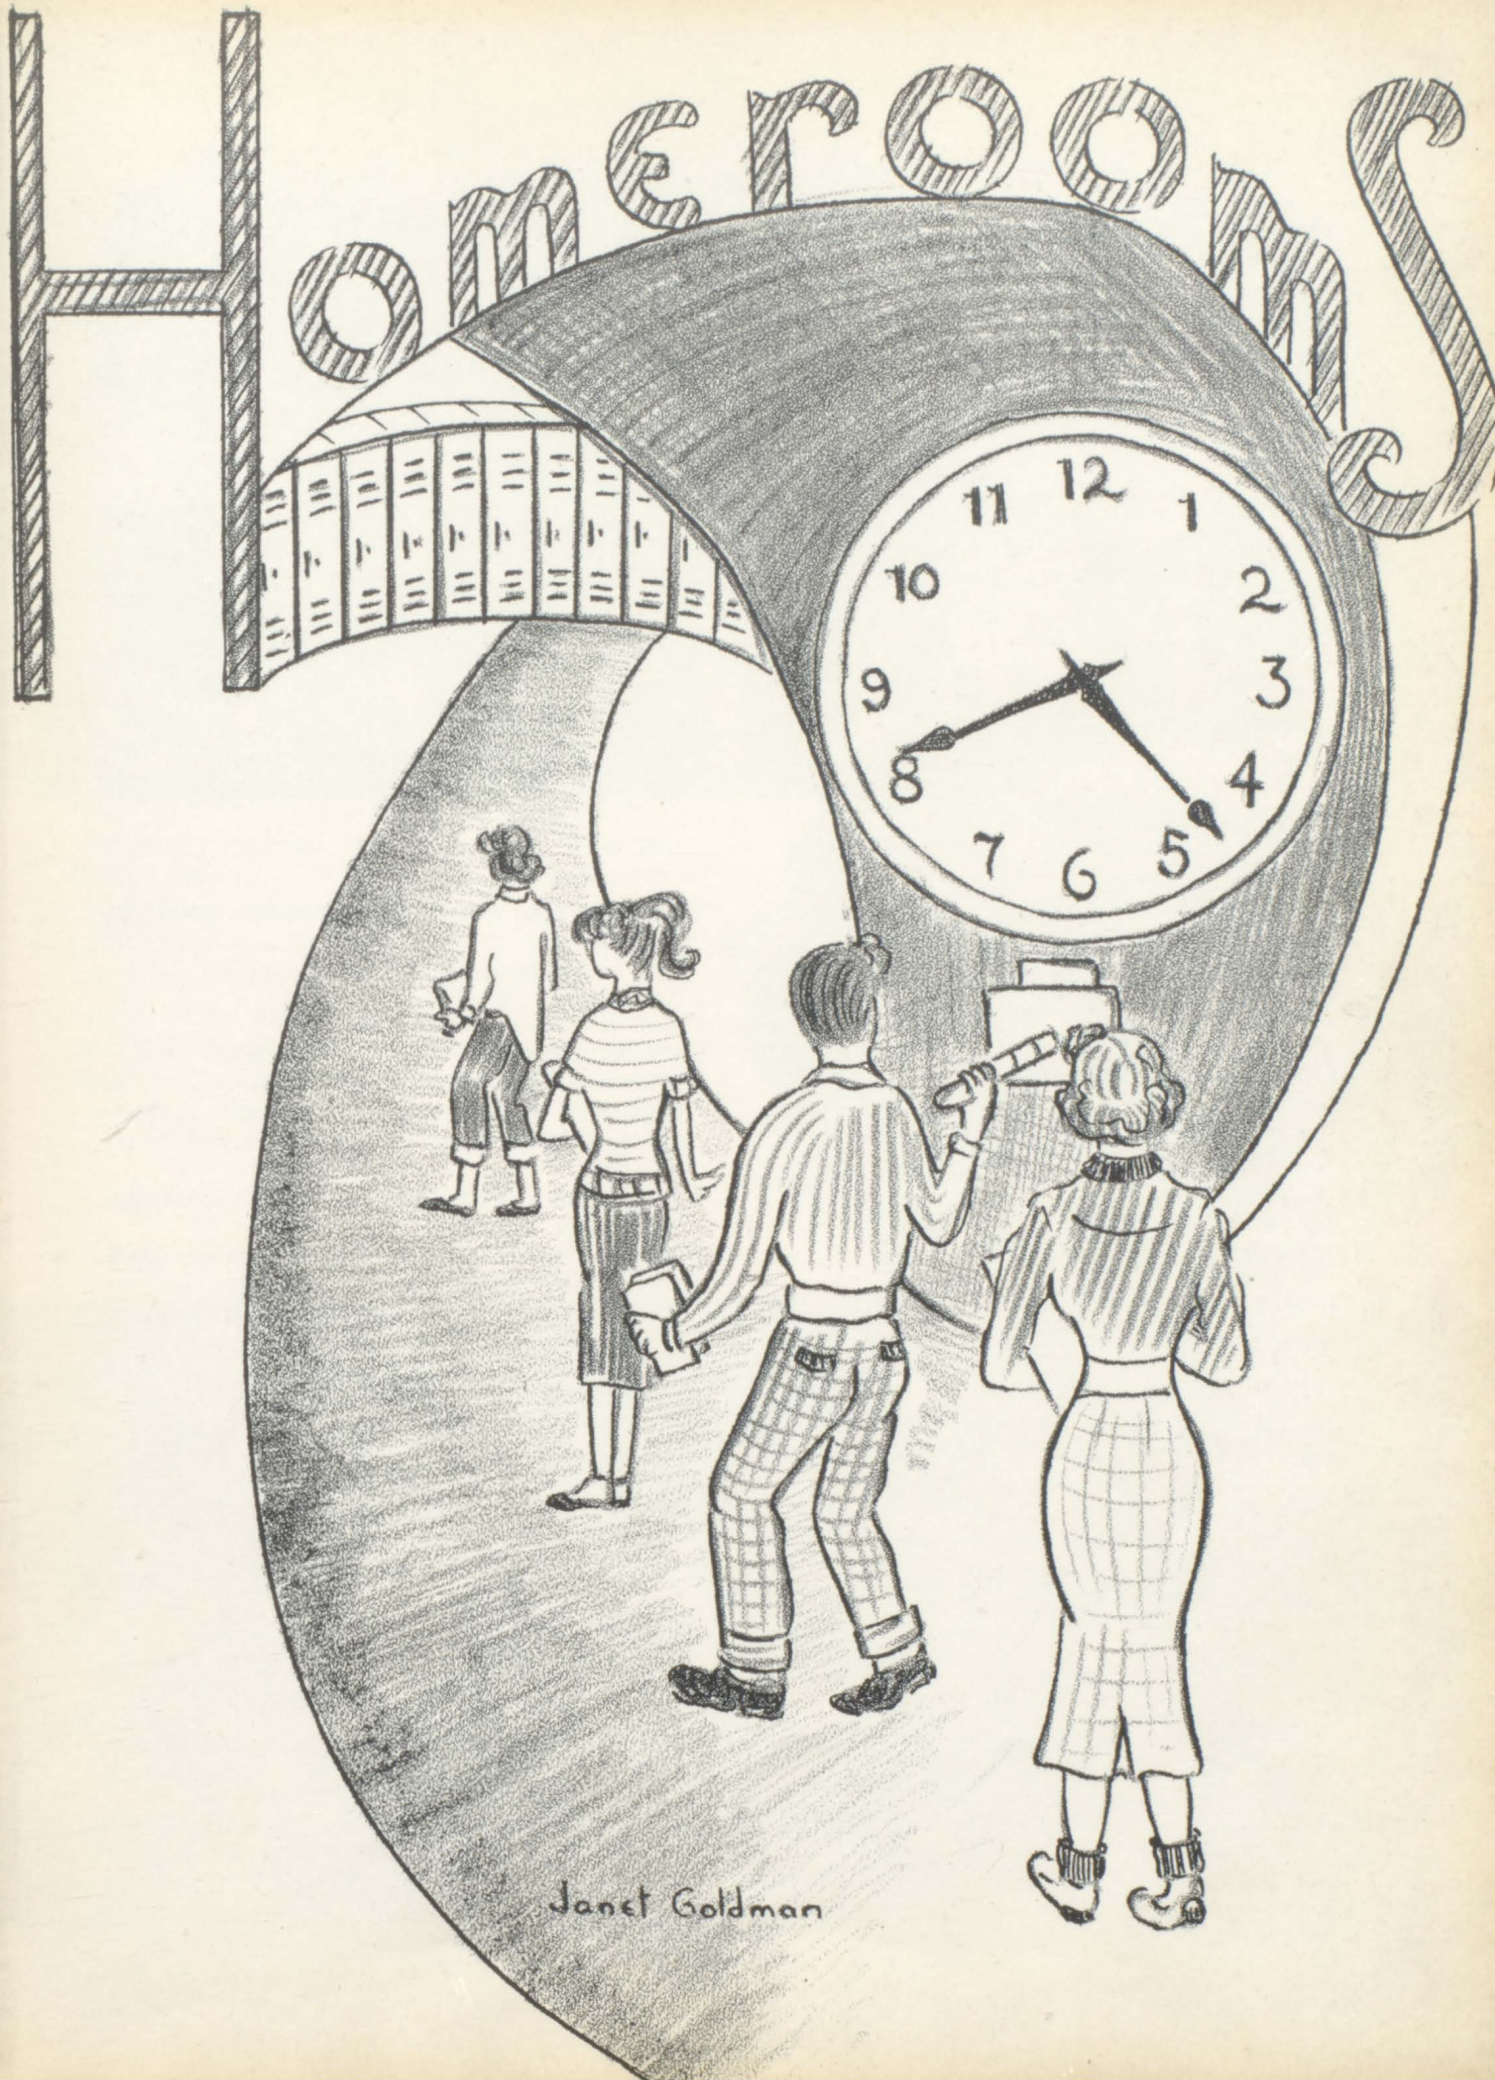

We should even have politicians among us,
Mayor, Governor, a Senator too;
Then of course we'll be in the service,
A pilot, or the captain of a crew.

From our crowd will emanate businessmen,
Possibly another Rockefeller or Ford,
Maybe we'll give rise to beautiful models,
Could be Miss America—that's the last word.

A Florence Nightingale may be in the making,
For our nurses will really be tops,
Firemen and rubbish collectors will benefit our town
And nowhere around can one find finer cops.

Whether we're professionals or big businessmen,
Or members of the laboring class,
We hope our lives will be successful and bright,
As into this new world we optimistically pass.

"Patton Leather"

The factory site of the "Patton Leather Division" of Weequahic can be found at district 115. Each morning, after punching the time clock, the smile of our foreman, Miss Patton, gives us a great "lift". Two "pairs" that will never "wear out" are Nataleine Kuner and Sandy Mayer, "polishing" Sandy's ring, and Cookie Klein and Iris Lauer, discussing their "sole" mates—Marv and Tee.

As the day begins we find some of our intellectual "soles", Herby Kornfeld and Thelma Wolfe, opening their books, while Sara Rothman, Greta Shampian, Myra Tatz, Marty Rosenfeld, and Billy Thomas are wagging their "tongues" against the threats of foreman Patton that they'll have to work overtime after 2:30. Long before the time bell rings we find Leslie Segal, David Friedman, and Irwin Shmurak at their benches ready for work. The confusion of the three Feldmans, Robert, Michael and Marvin will "last" in our memories. As the final bell rings, we find Marilyn Selednick "wedging" through the door before she'll be called a "heel" for arriving late. The happy-go-lucky "loafers" of the class—Alan Hirschorn, Louis Hyman, Lenny Strauss, and Donald Wilks, are always being told to "buckle" down and get to work. Each morning, in their cars, we see Barbara Miller and Nat Shaw ready to give a "lift" to all. There's a typical three-some—Irma Loeb, Joyce Golt, and Aurora Bellomo—"tied up in knots" over Physics and Chemistry. Three "strapping", "well tanned" lads are Sanford Guritsky, Irwin Schwartz, and Robert Zickerman. And so, as we go on our "slipshod" way, we shall remember our supervisor "shooing" us on to greater heights.

"Gross Graneries"

Entering the grist-mill, we meet a group of "chaffers" at Debby Gersten's work table. Lenny Pines, Audrey Blumenfeld, Lois Attles, Mona Lipowitz, and Shaldine Henoch are there and are feeling their oats. Moving to the next department, we find the corn experts, Shelly Chaplowitz, and Sid Eisenstein, in conference with Alex Evangelista. Coe McKeebey, Marty Frauwirth and Bob Knego are just milling about. Groups of workers are bustling helter-skelter, hither and thither. Fran Posella, Connie Jordan, and Shirley Weberling are grinding in the back. Stuart Hennes and Joel Rauchberg plus Ronnie Sheppard, and Eddy Sonnabend are closer than peas in a pod. Diane Stromeyer, Roberta Schiff, and Ina Schneiderman have their heads together, and boys are probably the subject. Marty Prince and Charley Fink are also in conference,—not about boys. Allan Kalb walks in from the field closely followed by Barney Milstein. Here comes Kernel Gross, the president of the company. As the 8:30 whistle blows to start work, there is a sudden rush at the door. Malcolm Fleischer, Marv Henick, and Sandy Holover stagger in barely in time. Ronald Systo, a new worker come to help with the harvest, is shown around by Ron Bruguere. The wheels start to grind and we leave the granery with the pun-gent odor of Mr. Gross' corn wafting after us.

"Moskowitz's Market"

Welcome to Moskowitz's Market, located at 123rd Street. The proprietor, Mr. Moskowitz, is top banana but no cabbage-head. The chief clerk, Jerry Scheckman, is head sawdust sprinkler. Ted Shpack, apple of the following peaches' eyes (Myrna Rosinsky, Phyllis Samuels, and Rona Fenichel) loafs around the bread counter. Marvin Horwitz, potato salesman, is all eyes for Joan Finkelson and Harriet Galinkin. Behind the meat counter, stands Lora Weiner selling frankfurters. Gil Seigel is tearing labels off of cans, trying to collect enough to send away for a space suit. Bev Green and Nancy Seelenfreund, two pert packages, are the wrapping clerks, and Irma Lerner is the cashier. Connie Garb, Lucille Itzikson, and Joan Oppenheim, stuff the holes in swiss cheese. Dorothy Germansky and Bev Greenfeder are labeling used boxes of Duz—Did;

Sheila Reitman and Sydelle Balsam, two good beans, are grinding coffee. Our market is a yearly entrant in the Salad Bowl classic. Marv Feinblatt, Irwin (Sunny) Schaeffer, Joe Sobota, Henry Aratow, and Joe Forlini are the stars of the team. Judy Lieb, Thelma Kreigman, Judy Saloff, and Esther Winet are tip-top cheerleaders. Now that the visit is over, you know that Moskowitz's Market is the place to shop.

"Hample's Soup"

You will find district 205 amidst the aroma of fine bubbling broth and smouldering soup-'n'-greens all rich in vitamin fun B, C, and D. Our chief cook, Miss Hample, for whom our luscious products are named, along with her right-hand assistant Norma Goldstein, is constantly sampling and taking care of our late workers such as Joan Chaslow to make sure she renders her slip. Around a sauce pan of naughty noodles, we find the district merry-makers, Edna Allen, Sandy Wiener, and Ellen Lucas. Our Kettle drum watcher, Joel Herman keeps an eye on our Cheery Elaine Porozok and Rita Pilger as they pep up our compound team of Joan Widerkehr, Ronald Zevin and Larry Kullman, while Meyer Kelner laughs on. Funny man Alan Palevsky does his best to make carrot top Linda Wayne feel gay along with Florence Brown, whose job it is to hold up the chicken while the Hample Kids, Marcia Ruckel, Harriet Scheff, and Carol Wanat pour the hot water through it to make our chicken consomme. Poor Pat Catona almost lost her job when the string broke as she pulled our little clam through pots of scalding water while Connie Settel, Irene Kaminski, Martha Elshans and Nancy Eckert keep together as peas in a pod. There goes Kenny Osten to tell Joan McAllister about a certain tomato whose name is on his uniform. Our own Rita Biebelberg takes charge of corner #4 creameries, and drives a hard whip to the backs of giggling Florinne Grober, and Fefi Stein.

And, as the sun sets, our Miss Hample locks the shop door to leave you only one thought: Try Hample's Soups, umm, umm good?????

"Lutzke Strikes"

Since the day of its organization, homeroom 209's motto has been "Be Happy Go Lutzke". At the head our Lutzke Strike Hit Parade is Bernie Katz, our amiable Master-of-Ceremonies. He is usually found conducting the 209 Glee Club on any week-day morning.

Members of the Club are: Sheila Grabelle, Adelyn Croman and Mim Sherr, sopranos; Evelyn Goldstein, Charlotte Kobetz and Marcia Schnee, altos; Marty Beim, David Grossman and Robert Hodes, tenors; and Jerry Handshuh, Walter Clarke, and Richard Walowit, bassos. This group accepts all requests and performs during any homeroom period. At times, after an especially long performance, Director Lutzke sings her own favorite, "Got Along Without Ya Before I Met Ya, Gonna Get Along Without Ya Now".

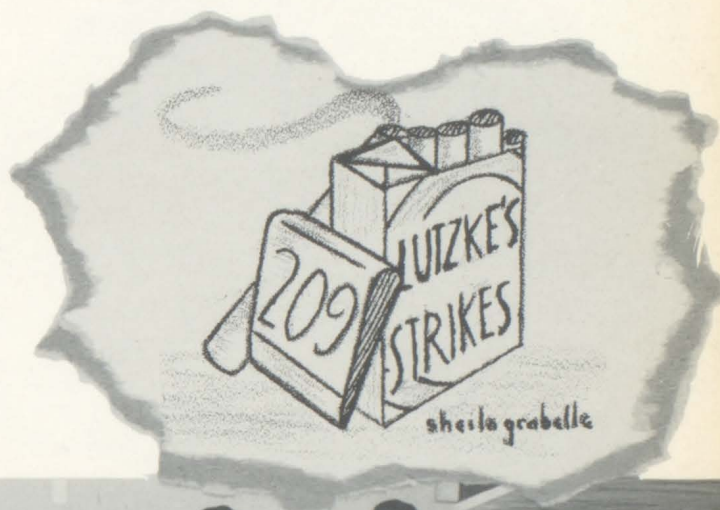

Requests vary at every program, but two "steadies" are Rona Brumer and Judie Seidman who always seem to favor "Smoke Rings". Bernice Hilton, Sandra Hollander and Flora Kaufman like "Happy Talk", but after a meaningful glance from Mrs. Lutzke they are more likely to sing "Forgive Me".

Barbara King sees to it that "Blue Moon" is heard on every program and Bette Feitelson is always asking Sigmund Haberman, our arranger, for "The Man I Love". As a special Lutzke Strike feature, comedian Richard Wasserman entertains.

Most appreciative listeners are: Ruth Alstaedter, Rochelle Morginstin, Esther Folery and Marilyn Baxman. All commercials are performed by Lois Weinstein, Larry Perlman and Joan Meyers who insist that Smoke does not get in your eyes.

The Lutzke Strikers are a happy lot indeed, and after an extensive poll of the homeroom, all agree on the three top songs of the Hit Parade. They are, in order of appearance, "Hail Weequahic", "Pomp and Circumstance", and "So Long, It's Been Good to Know You".

"Deutsch's Dolls"

As one enters room 219, he is struck with a delightful, awe-inspiring vision—of enthralling beauty to the eyes of any normal male.

Typewriters????? Girls!!!!

Here we observe a captivating array of the cutest "dollings" molded with the aid of our amiable Mrs. Deutsch.

As Chairman Cathy Amato bravely attempts to read the Bible over the incessant din, in dashes Joan Goldstein, late as usual. Who's that right behind her? Why, it's Loretta Pitman, of course. But let's find out about Sandy Gelbord's "latest" while Fay Morris tries despairingly to collect the dues.

The doll with the bangs who blushes so easily is Honey Fleishman, and Joyce Deuchler is the one with that radiating smile. Busily working on an advertisement for the Calumet is Connie Seaman, while Helene Hornstein is trying to figure out what she's doing. Irene Surdykowski and Sandy Hildebrandt are fiendishly devising a scheme to obliterate English homework (or is it perhaps the teacher?). By the satisfied look on Elaine Gordon's face, I think she's finally contrived a plan to beat the janitors to school in the morning.

From one corner the voice of Eddie Fisher slowly lulls Shirley Lasser into heavenly bliss, while "visions of Pennsylvania" dance through the head of Marlene Adams. Sitting by the window is Henrietta Watkin who seems to be up in the clouds. Her boy friend, a member of the Air Force, may very well be the reason.

Our dolls have talent, too. The walls resound in response to Fran Leiter playing her flute and the voice of Lois Farrell fills the room. Our dancing models, Lois Weinstein and Francine Yablonsky, will surely have "entrechat" their way to fame. With the baton we have Bobbie Slavsky who's top twirler.

Representing the "Sparkle Plenty" assortment is Elaine Eisenberg with her newly acquired engagement ring.

Recently there has been a large demand for talking dolls. Room 219 feels confident of meeting the trend. For example, let us note Arlene Rigelhaupt and Ruth Wuensch reviewing the daily gossip. Their silvery (?) tones are the result of years of experience.

Our crying dolls, Harriet Beer and Francis Reches, are still lamenting over the loss of that boy puppet who almost joined us amidst the maze of typewriters.

We also have among us doll-sets, for when could Bobbie Kelmer and Dotty Morgner not be seen in each other's company, or Carole Kirschner, Sandy Mink, and Essie . . . Essie Gross, you forgot to take attendance again!!!!

Now that you have viewed our distinctive assortment of dolls, I am sure you will agree that there are no finer products of the Weequahic Holding Company.

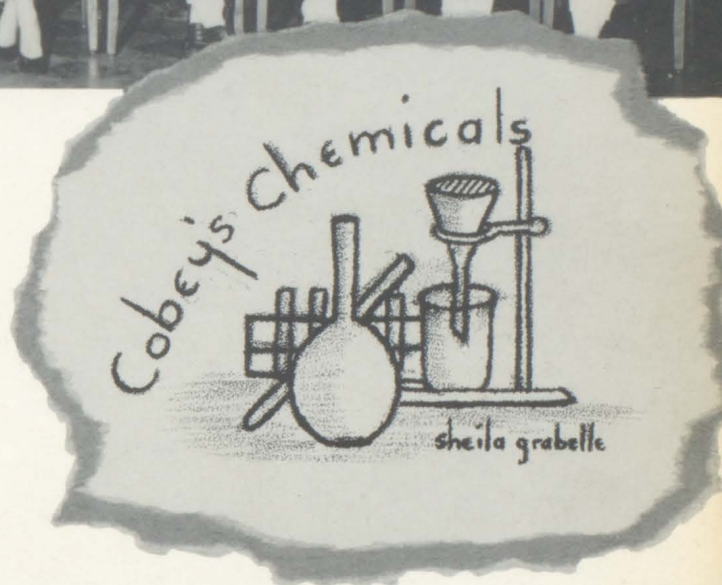

"Cobey's Chemicals"

What's cooking in 221? Elements are always boiling, and the beakers are brewing brand-new concoctions. Herbert Rasizer is measuring the correct quantities of Arthur Koll needed for the furnace. Then, Herby will Kahl it off and Danny Perlman will crystallize. The apprentices are busy learning the law "David Ackerman, Barry Cohen, Dolores Edick, Philip Farinella, Shirley Fischler, Naomi Gartenberg, Barry Gliken, Howard Greenberg and Stephen Hirsch have a valence of ONE; all others have a valence of TWO, except Alan Jacobs, Bernice Jentis, Feige Karten, Ira Kent, Ruth Lefkowitz, Arthur Liebman, Victor Muldrow, Carole Muntler and Richard Rosenberg, which have a valence of THREE or FIVE."

Harriet Epstein effervesces, and Joel

Shapiro precipitates more Sulphuring. Marcia Sherman is pondering over the atomic table, while Carl Weiner is designing bigger and better television screens. Amorphous forms of these chemicals are Phyllis Wymisner and Allen Wymiszner.

"You're just an atom bomb to me,
It's good to be alive;
I'm 35; how old are you?
Are U-235?"

"Saltman's Shakers"

Welcome to Saltman's Shakers, located in district 306. Mrs. Saltman is the genial head of the concern who reigns while it pours. She likes to throw her weight around, and she is affectionately known as "Alice". Peeking through our looking glass, you see a veritable Wonderland of Shakers.

The 8:30 whistle blows, and we sing a chorus of "Got Along Without You Before I Met You, Gonna Get Along Without You Now", led by Florence Brodsky, who is swinging her cellophane lunch bag. Five minutes after the whistle, in runs Gail Kesselhaut. Today she's late because her parrakeet overslept. Ann Tripodi tries to take the attendance and Bernie Gross tries to read the Bible, but Bev Weisburd and Mrs. Saltman are having a wild argument, and Shirley Schertzer is yelling, so Ann marks herself absent and Bernie becomes a heretic.

In the midst of this chaos, you will spy several unique shakers. Among the spicier shakers are Roslyn Chesner, Eileen Lower, Eleanor Appleman, Felice Fisher, and Arlene Katcher. Among the luckier shakers who are matched up in salt and pepper sets, signified by rings around their necks, are Mimi Lipson, Leonore Feder, Marcia Markowitz, Judy Raff, Rochelle Tauber, Janice Rose, and Arlene Turk. The tallest female shaker is Charlotte Bernstein, and the shortest is Marlene Jeret. Sootie Slomowitz is shaking all over with movie gossip.

But we are forgetting the male shakers. Though not as curvaceous as their female counterparts, they are just as salty. Ted Smith and Richard Larkey are the two shakers most often seen in the company of shakers of the opposite spice. Richie Jubert, Jerry Stern and Phil Mulligan compose the Triple Terror, and are usually seen having snow ball fights in the factory. Jack "The Quiet One" Moskowitz hardly shakes at all, and Tony Sanzone, new to our factory, has just begun to shake.

Now that you "old salts" have seen our factory, I guess we can stop pouring it on. But you must agree, we certainly add flavor to the "Weequahic Holding Company".

"Bergman's Brewery"

Here we are in district 333, ready to set foot into the wide expanse of Bergman's Brewery. We approach Mrs. Bergman, chief of the foam, and inquire as to whether she can spare one or two guides for a short time. She informs us that Mimi Gershberg and Rhoda Schactman, two girls, bubbling over with enthusiasm, will serve as excellent ones, and we begin our tour.

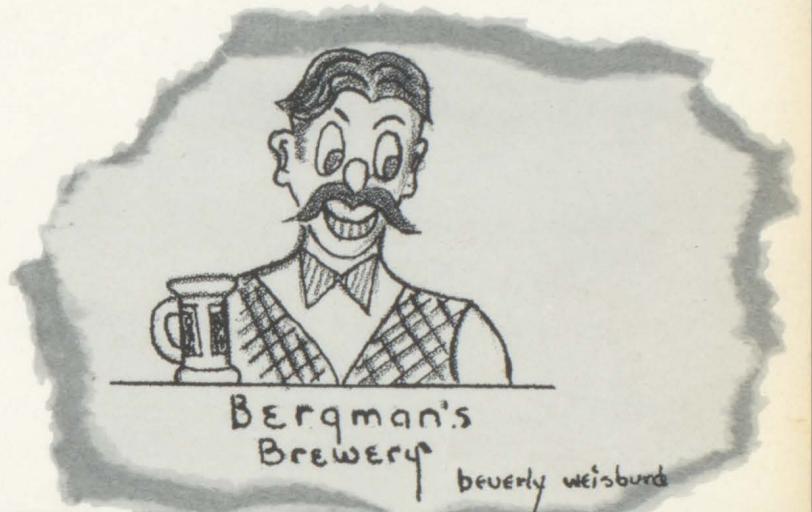

First in sight are vat boys, Roger Solomon, Kenny Cheskin, and Fred Hettenbach, intensely intrigued with their work. Something seems to be brewing among Heywood Girion, Sandy Grossman, Jimmy Leen, and Stan Wolfe (probably discussing their A. B. C.'s). There goes the late bell, and in hops Paula Katz.

What's that argument going on in the middle of the floor? Oh, it's only Richie Glick, Paul Kretchmar, and Paul Walker having a hot discussion on the merits of the draught. The ceiling above us is shaking and we wonder what's going on upstairs. The guides tell us it's only the Bergman girls, Rena Greebel, Marsha Milkin, and Rhoda Beshner, going through their paces. Aging in the corner are Chick Bressel, and Sandy Blumenfeld, waiting to emerge 100% proof. Busy at their stations copying bock work are Bob Klugman, Donny Rosen, and Ronny Baron. As we near the rear of the building, a heavy smell of liquor pervades the air and we see the reason for it. Jim Keefe, official taster of the firm, has been taking his work to heart again. Something ales Hannah Besunder and there goes Sue Arkus to her rescue with a first ade kit.

Phil Kalfus, Larry Lubow, and Norm Schulaner, have their heads together, trying to evolve a scheme to prevent Mrs. Bergman from collecting absence excuses, although they don't think they'll ever succeed. Mel Lissner, Herb Meadow, and Marty Zients can be heard criticizing the result of Al Lemkowitz's 3 years in Bergman Brewery, a book called "How to Pass the Bar".

Our time is up now and our guides return us to our starting point. Perhaps in five, ten, or even twenty-five years, we may return to see what changes time shall have made in an efficient and well-run organization such as this.

Industry

Industry and man: These two words are linked together with bonds of the most unbreakable substance, for they are the essence of man's being. Wherever man was, wherever man is, wherever man will be, giant, gleaming colossi of steel and marble will rise upward toward the sky. Within man's soul are visions of unreachable greatness, toward which he is always grasping. Forms and shapes, great of size, mighty in strength, formulate within his consciousness . . . so it has been . . . so it will always be.

Results are the great, sprawling, smoky, beautiful cities. It creates the steep canyoned streets, blue and cool with a frontal steepness of money and great business; it molds and forces the simple substance into the panorama of strange and wonderful things that fill the earth. It creates the soft, magic lights of green and gold and lavish brown, warm amber and onyx; it raises buildings upward, as the face of a white cliff, vertical, cool blue, hazed with mist and reflecting the warm gold of the morning sun. It tears from the flesh of the earth, precious stones, gold and minerals. It sends twisting, winding, gleaming tracks and trains down steep grades, only to draw them back, puffing and grinding with metallic resonance, overflowing with colored ore, heaped with substance. It raises forests of gleaming, aluminum stacks, smoking like erupting volcanoes, covering vast areas of land with their twisting shadows. It sprawls over great acreage in the form of low, modern production plants. It sends dark ships over hidden oceans, laden heavily with precious goods. It fills a hundred million freight cars with coal and minerals, sending them to the ends of the earth on never ending rails of silver.

Its fabulousness is evolved everywhere. It is the pulse of time and space, flowing and beating while men live, sleep, die, and awake. It is full of the billion dark, secret moments of genius; it sucks to its might the madness and passion of reckless youth. It eats from the great piles of iron and coal, it drinks from the black lakes of oil—a ceaseless glut, creating life.

This mighty force, this great force that is industry, it is also a man's dream . . . a god's memory. For man, it is the whole packed glory of the earth, the splendor, power and beauty of gigantic strength. For the gods, it is a tremendous memory of space and power, of exultant creations and primeval fires. It is the cold strength of steel turned to brightness by lonely, hot suns. It is might and power, wild, savage and beautiful. And its song is a clear one; its light is pure, a great current flowing through the lands of humanity.

It guides man's unsure hands on to wondrous achievements.

Man feeds it with cheap, raw, substance.

It spews out finished, strange, beautiful products of precious content.

It makes gods out of flesh.

It possesses great wisdom, but reveals little; what it does impart, man builds to the stars with.

Man realizes the vastness of this great power . . . and tries to harness it.

Because wherever man was, wherever man is, wherever man will be . . . there will be industry. It is to be so in all of his future as in his past, for even the ancient books of God tell mankind to follow this force's path.

It was said then:

"and He hath filled them with the spirit of God in wisdom, in understanding, and in knowledge, and in all manner of workmanship . . . to devise works of art . . . to work in gold . . . in silver . . . in copper. He hath filled them with wisdom of heart to execute all manner of work . . . and to devise works of art."

And so it will always be.

Gabriel Hornstein

"Prince of Wails"

Why is it that everyone refers to a baby as a helpless little thing? Give a baby a home of his own, and he is the least helpless object in it. All he needs to do to have his every want filled is to let out one small peep. If help does not come at once, he need only extend this peep into a wail. By forcing a scream, he can throw the entire household into a state of confusion from which it may not come out for days.

He can't walk; he can't talk; he can't feed or bathe himself; and in that he has an unmixed blessing. Unable to walk, he can lie in bed all day and kick his feet—the envy of every adult who sees him. Unable to talk, he need never answer unnecessary questions, become involved in a political argument, or politely listen to a bore. When faced by the latter, he can turn his head the other way, yawn, or simply go to sleep, and have his actions approved by polite society.

He need never worry over what he is going to wear today or what he will eat for lunch. If he doesn't wear a stitch, he is perfectly content, and no one will raise an eyebrow. If he doesn't like his food, he can spit, blow, or bubble it out, no matter who is watching, or he can proceed to eat it all. He will be applauded for what two years later will be considered most unbecoming.

Soon the world at large will criticize the way he grows, although now his admirers are enchanted because it grows at all. They will criticize the way he eats, although now all are satisfied if he gets it down any way. If he turns out to be beautiful, good, rich or successful, part of the world will envy him; and if he turns out to be ugly, mean, poor or a failure, the other part of the world will rebuke him; but now, for the last time in his life, he is written about by poets, pinched under the chin by old ladies, cooed at by Scrooges, and adored by all.

Far from being helpless in the world, he is the only human being who can depend on it. It wasn't idle conversation that prompted me to say, "In the next life I'm going to be a perpetual baby." Do you blame me?

Looking Ahead

Upon completion of a four-year course in a secondary school, the young man is prepared to travel the uncertain path into the future. On his eighteenth birthday, or soon thereafter, he receives a letter beginning "Greetings" Having received other birthday cards that day, he is unaffected by the salutation until he examines the epistle more closely. It appears that Local Draft Board No. 18 is inquiring into the business of his coming down there for a chat because some personage, an Uncle Sam, no relative he can think of, is in need of young men to manage some obscure affairs in a remote place known as Korea, and elsewhere.

It is amazing to note how quickly a person's complexion can change color. Really! Before he can exclaim, "Wot the devil!" he is officially inducted.

But wait! The youngster is to attend the university, and only in rare cases are students taken at such an early stage in the game. Ah, but by some odd coincidence, he is a rare case! "Someone must fill the quota," goes the story. "Quite sorry, old boy—people getting killed today, more and more—can't seem to stop it, you know—don't you want to protect your country, hmhm? After all, we'll send you back to school if you come back!"

This last choice remark is significant in transforming the unfortunate lad into an undetermined psychopath, and ars longa, vita brevis.

As it happens, he is assigned to a base in Texas where he develops smallpox, and the entire camp is quarantined for six months, truly a sad turn of events.

Well, now, where are we? Wishing to mind his own business, the boy was deprived of that by his selfish draft board, which finally managed to bungle up forty-three thousand service men somewhere in Texas.

There! That'll teach those stuffed shirts that they can't interfere with youth, not when it's looking ahead.

Our Goal

"Peace on earth, good will toward men."
A solemn yet familiar quotation,
Has been the constant hope of man
For many a generation.
The only way to have this peace,
Is to strengthen the goodness in mankind,
To overthrow his envy and greed,
And remove all evils from his mind.
This task is not a simple one,
For we must revert to earth's creation,
As right with the birth of Adam and Eve,
Began jealousy and temptation.
From one year to the next year
Man's vices have increased.
They've grown from a few to a million and one.
And not yet have they ceased.
Some have tried to win world peace,
But the results are sad to admit,
Because it's not the chore of a few,
Each one must do his bit.
Maybe someday in the very near future,
All will work hand in hand,
And the hope of man will be realized
With peace reigning through the land.

God's Work

I can picture myself in an open car
Under the clear blue sky above,
I can see all things as they really are:
The trees—the grass—the dove.
The birds on high and the flowers below
And the fish in the babbling brook,
They're all God's work and He's proud to show
While humble me is proud to look.
Just to fly along and feel the breeze
Go whizzing past my face,
And hear the birds up in the trees . . .
How I'd love to take their place!

DEBORAH GERSTEN

The Helmet

The room is blue, furnished in maple. In it is a desk filled to overflowing with boyish things; toys of a bygone day are mingled indiscriminately with physics books and college applications. The boy enters; he writes, reads, and perhaps dreams. A mind and a body develops to form a complete individual.

The individual is bathed in the semi-circle of murky light that falls about him. The rest of the room is indistinguishable, hidden in half-shadow. The gray shades of dusk creep along the floor—the boy sits alone.

The mind that develops stops to ponder. It feels the need to understand and to act; but it cannot. It senses that something is wrong. A small gold watch ticks incessantly, marking time, waiting. Blue eyes, intelligent eyes, rove around the room seeking that which is the cause of the forboding ominous silence. They rest upon the black helmet on the wall—

A piece of black metal, molded to fit a soldier's head, a black swastika on a field of blood red. The work of Man's hands, product of his skill, remains embodied in a shining piece of steel; but the man himself disappears into the nothingness from whence he came. The helmet has become a symbol, a symbol of the brotherhood of man!!

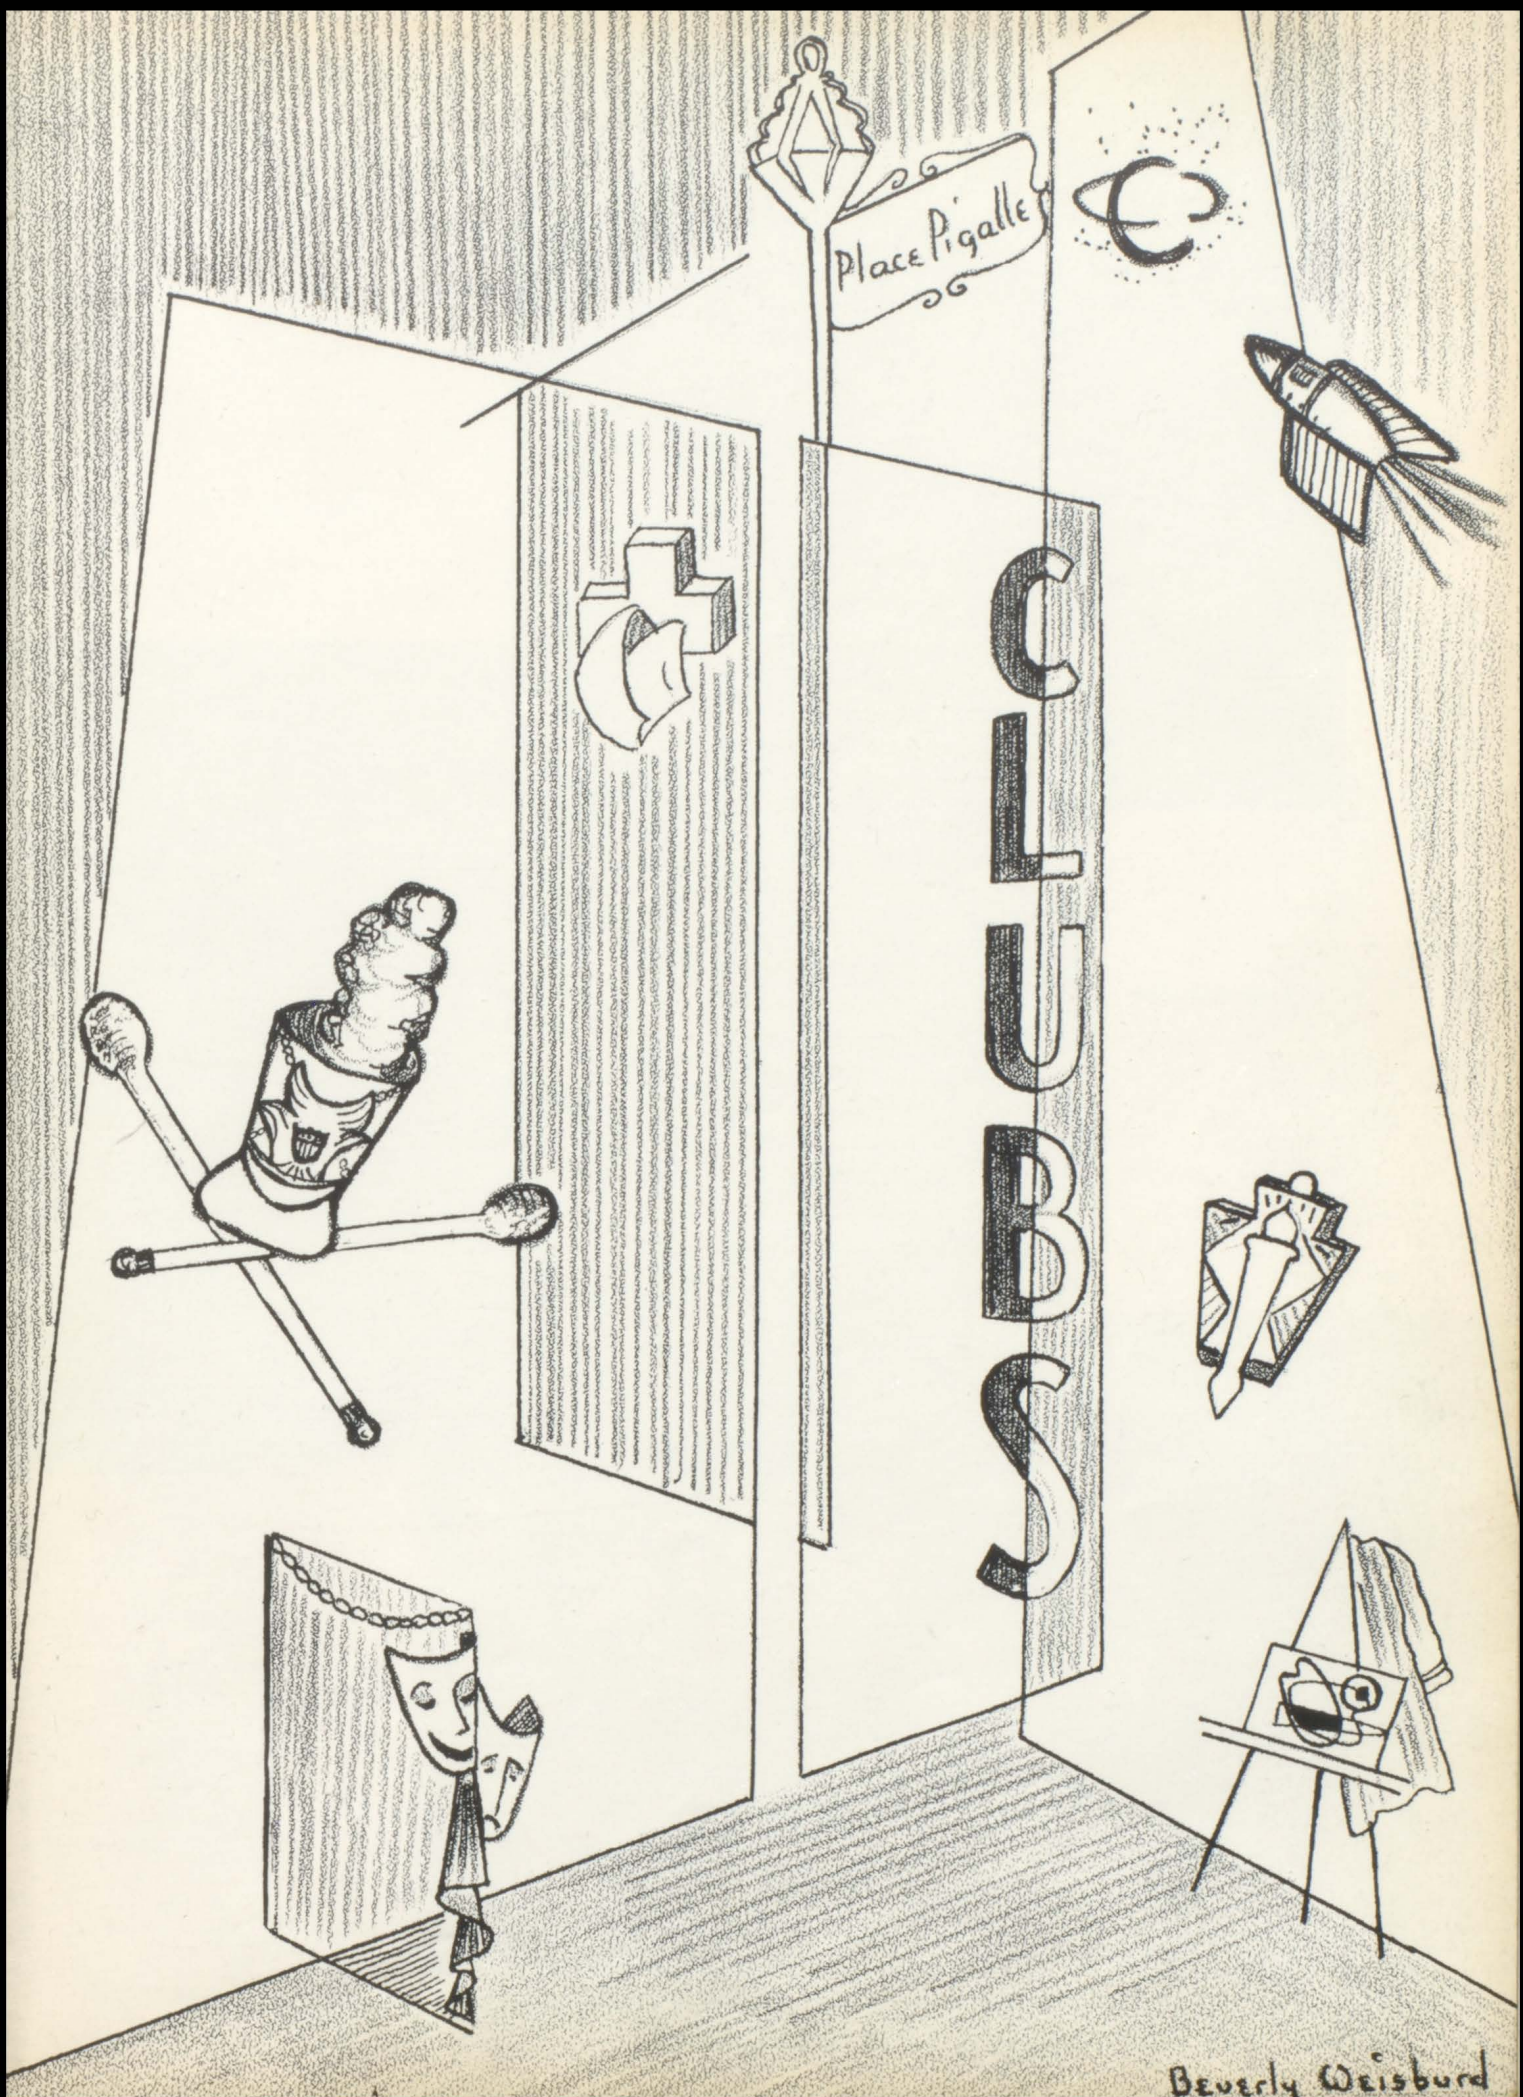

The soldier's blood and the blood of those who died in the ovens mingle to form the red field which enfolds the black swastika, perched like a vulture upon its prey. Its hypnotic suggestion of security forces men to gaze upon it, to try to smother the fear and revulsion at its hypnotic suggestion of security. Its awesome strength and simple power stand yet today, grim monument of an idea that was smothered and beaten but not destroyed.

Its story is now over, immortalized only in the timeless annals of history and in the hearts of those who have lost loved ones. The symbol lives on. The helmet was not destroyed; the hatred and prejudice thrived like a huge cancer that spreads throughout the earth, feeding on the minds and souls of men.

What of this boy who sits in solitude? Will his youthful idealism and hope be allowed to grow or will he become one of an army marching goose-step through the streets, cheered on by masses of faceless people? Will the sun that strikes his blond hair, turning it to gold, fall instead upon hard, black steel? Will he become a man, an individual, or an infinitesimal part of a monstrous machine?

Will his black helmet hang upon the wall?

Class Will

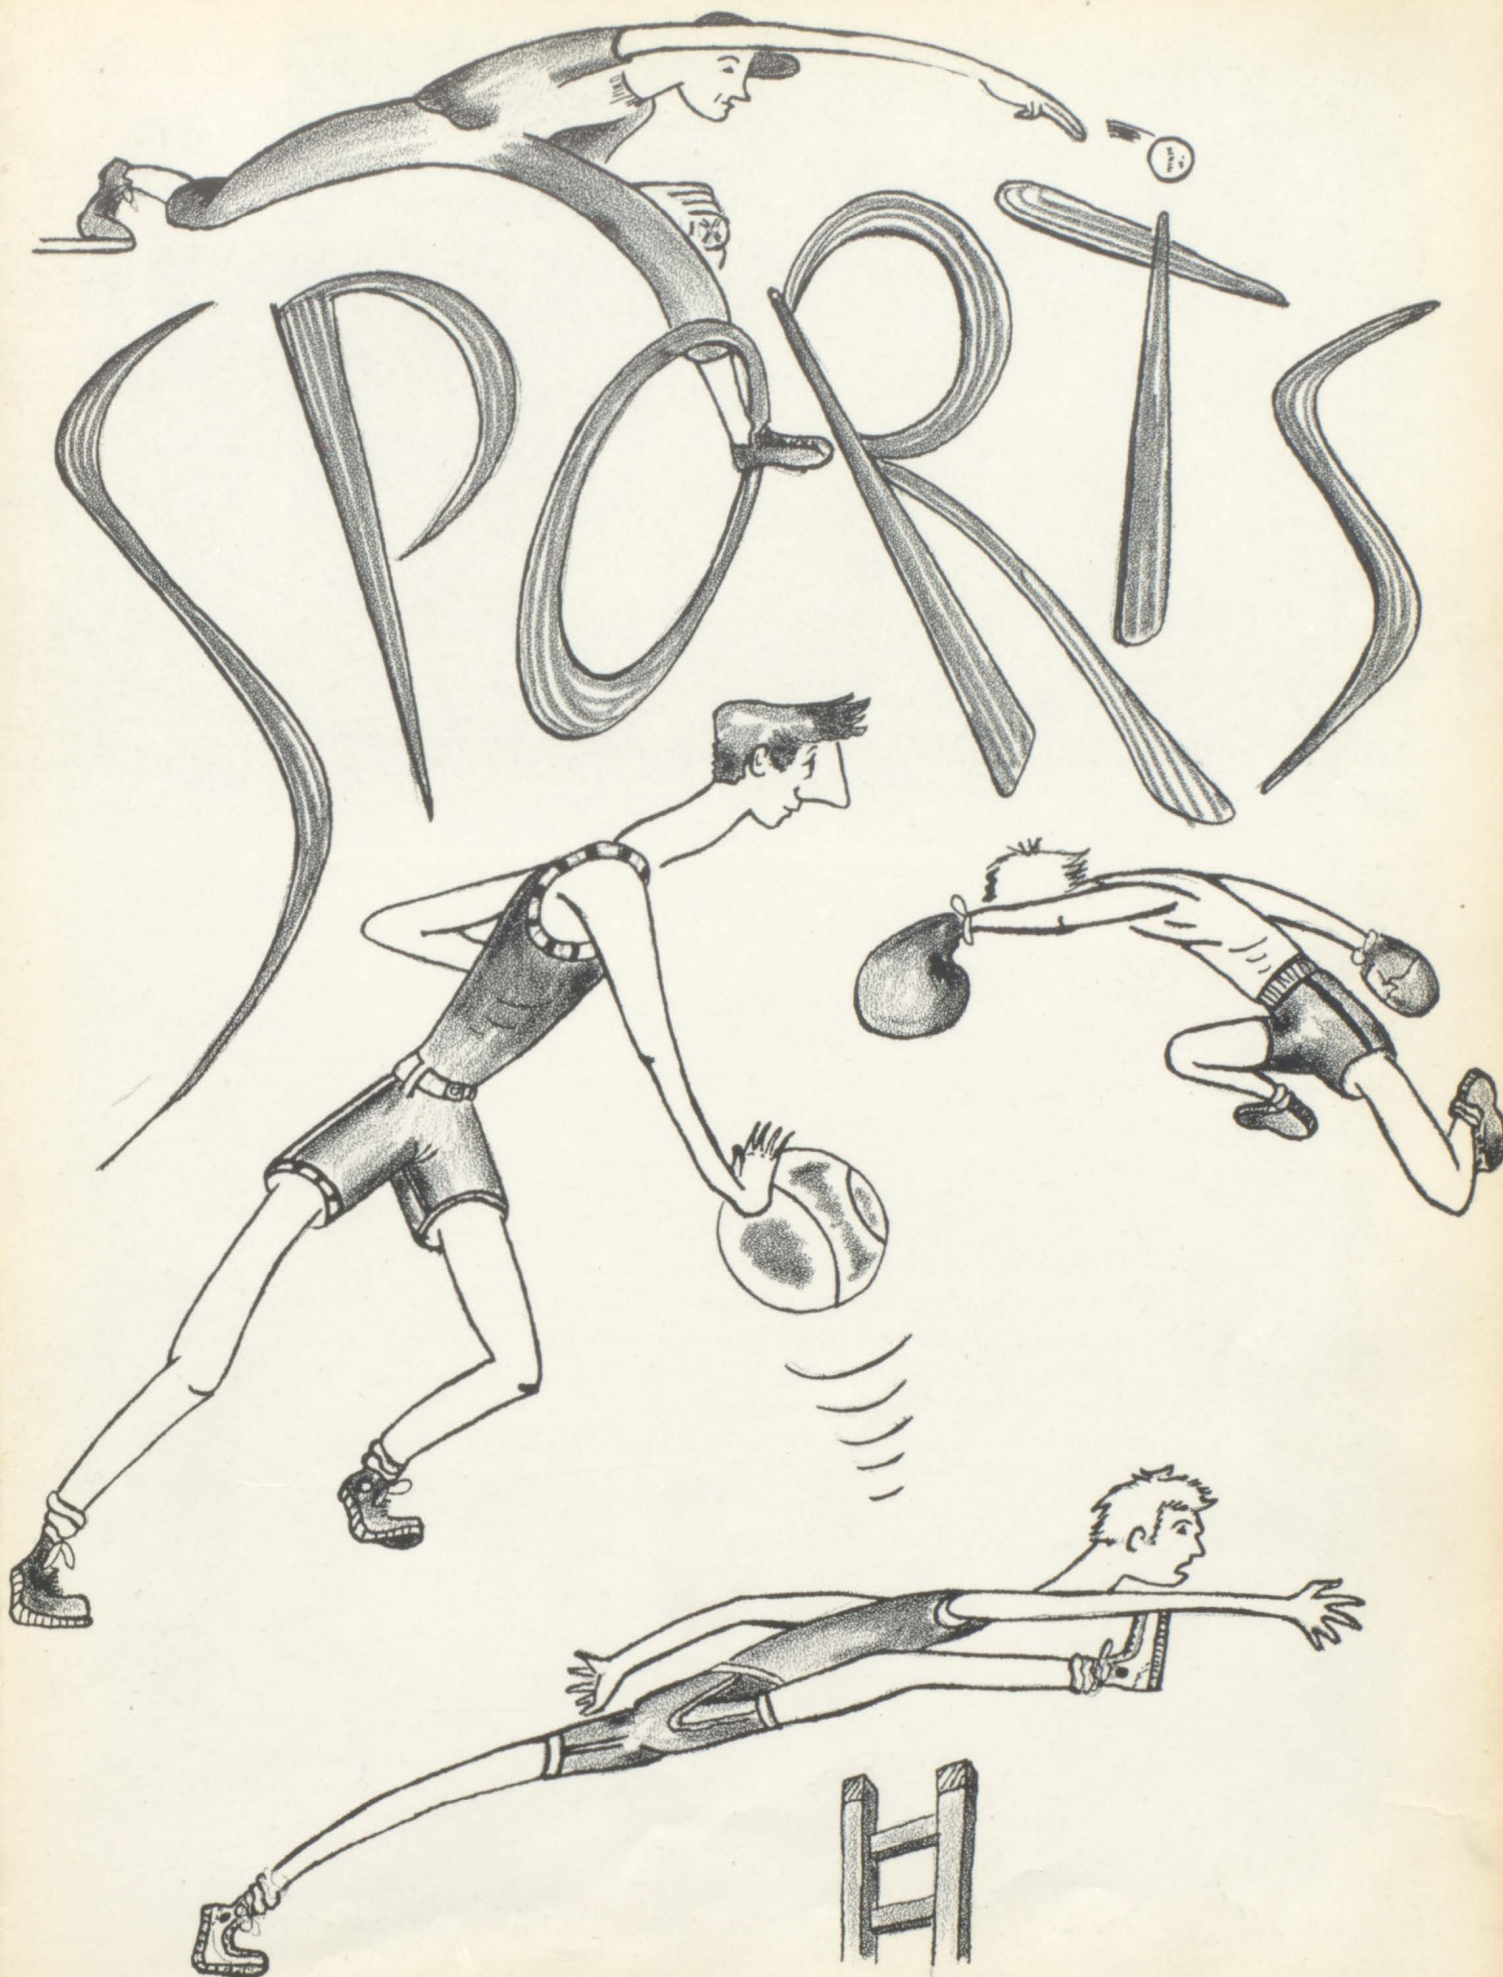

We, the Graduating Class of June, 1953, of Weequahic High School, erected in 1932 by the City of Newark, founded by Robert Treat and his stalwart followers in 1666, in the State of New Jersey, chartered in 1664 by His Most Christian Majesty, Charles II, and sanctioned by His Eminence, Sir Samuel Fink, do hereby bequeath the following:

1. To Mr. Conovitz—Happy memories as an educator and administrator.
2. To Mr. Mayer—More sophomores with more problems.
3. To Mr. Gross—An extra set of keys for his cabinet.
4. To the Faculty—The Student Body.
5. To the Student Body—The Faculty.
6. To the Board of Education—The Student Body and the Faculty.
7. To the homeroom teachers—A course in handwriting analysis.
8. To the new Senior A's—The glory that once was ours (?).
9. To the cafeteria—A cook.
10. To the janitors—The ancient proverb, "A new broom sweeps clean."

By affixing this seal on this seventeenth day of June, nineteen hundred and fifty-three, we irrevocably declare this to be our last will and testament.

CLASS OF JUNE 1953

Weequahic High once again proved that they are no longer the city doormat in football. The 1951 "City Champs", under the guidance of coaches Stamelman, Horey, and Sabo showed their excellent training in every game.

Marv Feinblatt, Richie Rosenberg, and Jim Leen were the sparkplugs of the backfield on offense. Marv and Rich supplied the power and Jim provided the speed. Al Palevsky was a very efficient line backer, used mainly on the defense. Stalwarts on the line were Ted Shpack and Jerry Scheckman on the ends, with Walter Clarke and Ronnie Barron in the middle. The Indian reserve strength included Mel Lissner, Herb Rasizer, Lou Hyman and Rich Walowit. Marv Feinblatt and Ted Shpack were bestowed with the honor of "All City" for their outstanding performances on the gridiron.

Our Eleven finished third in the City League this year and completed the season with a respectable record of four wins and four losses. Thanks Coach Stamelman!

TRACK

Our track team will lose many of its most outstanding components because of graduation this year. Mr. Hofer and the undergrads must carry on.

Excelling in field events were athletes Sig Haberman, Marv Feldman, Lee Brody, Richie Rosenberg and Ira Kent. These hard working young men each took part in the javelin, discus throw and shotput.

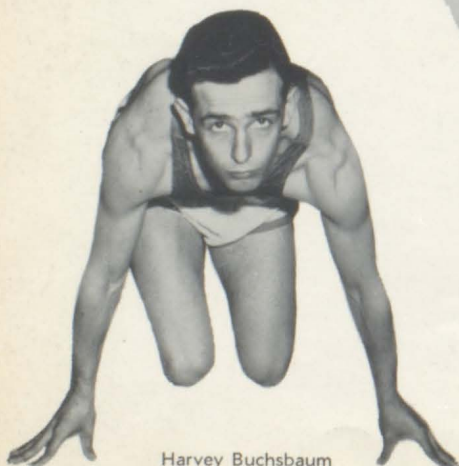

Those who sparkled in running were Jim Leen, Vic Muldrow, Harvey Buchsbaum, Ted Shpack, and James Keefe. Our jet-propelled friends won victory after victory in the various track meets in city and state.

CROSS COUNTRY

Victor Muldrow, Harv Buchsbaum, and Richard Glick were the only boys to receive letters for running the tough 2½ miles. Although hampered by injuries, the harriers managed to turn in steady performances. Harv placed 15th in the state in his junior year and Vic was 5th in the city and state novice meets.

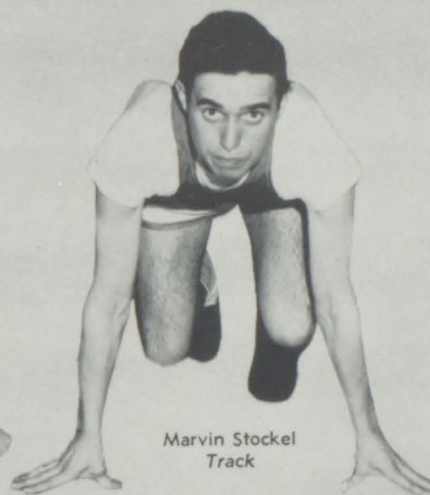

We are proud of our boys' achievements to date, and feel that they will improve their record constantly in their careers.

SWIMMING

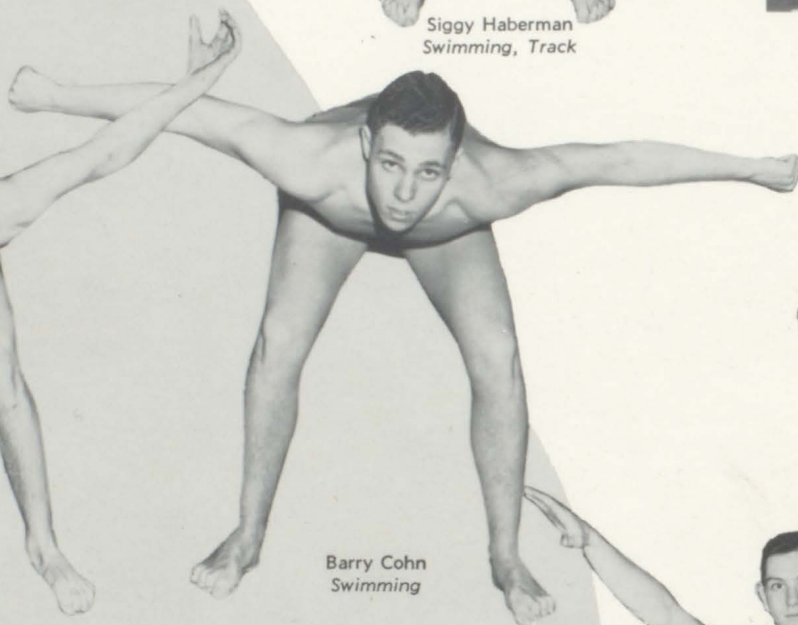

The class of June 1953 flashed championship form in winning the city title during the 1952 season. Ronnie Sheppard, Barry Cohn, Richard Larkey, Ed Sonnabend, and Sig Haberman were the active fish in the pool. Ronnie holds the present backstroke record in the city, and he had also contributed many wins in the individual and medley races. Richard and Barry also proved themselves capable breaststrokers. Barry was on the medley relay team with Ronnie when the Indians broke the city-meet record in that event. Ed Sonnabend participated in the freestyle events and helped greatly during the regular season. Splashing to third in the city meet this year, the Weequahic Mermen compiled a record of eight wins and three defeats. Congratulations to Coach Irv Levin and the boys.

BASEBALL

Under the tutelage of our new coach, Mr. Meyer Schwartz, the Indian "9" fared well this year. The class of '53 is well represented as we placed eight members on the baseball team. The outfield comprised veterans Lennie Strauss, Sid Eisenstein, Herbie Meadow, and Stan Wolfe. Leading the pitching staff were Alex Evangelista and Lefty Teddy Slate. A stalwart at second base was Sheldon Chaplowitz, and a fine all-round job was done by Sandy Guritsky. Also among us were last year's Varsity members, Marv Feinblatt and Walter Clarke.

BASKETBALL

Although Weequahic's Varsity Basketball Team did not compile a commendable record, there were flashes of outstanding ability. Meyer Kelner, Jerry Scheckman and Jimmy Leen were the mainstays of the squad. Meyer Kelner's prowess as a rebounder and set shot artist was recognized when he was nominated as "All City" forward. Captain Jerry Scheckman, with his deadly set shot, and Jim Leen, hard-driving guard, also exhibited brilliant play. Mal Fleischer and Joe Sobota supplied the extra height on the team and proved their ball-retrieving powers to good advantage. Ira Kent, Ron Baron and Vic Muldrow performed admirably as ball handlers and play-makers.

The boys wish the best of success to Coach Donn who left us for a chairmanship in Physical Ed at East Side High School.

CHEER LEADERS

GIRLS' SPORTS

The Class of June '53 is well represented among girl gym letter winners. Rarely do girls achieve a thousand points. We know that those who have, acquired precise timing of the racquets, baseball bats, bowling balls, and the fabulous bow and arrow, and had an almost perfect attendance record in school. They have been prepared for gym at all times, and they have earned high marks in gym. The girls who have met all the qualifications are:

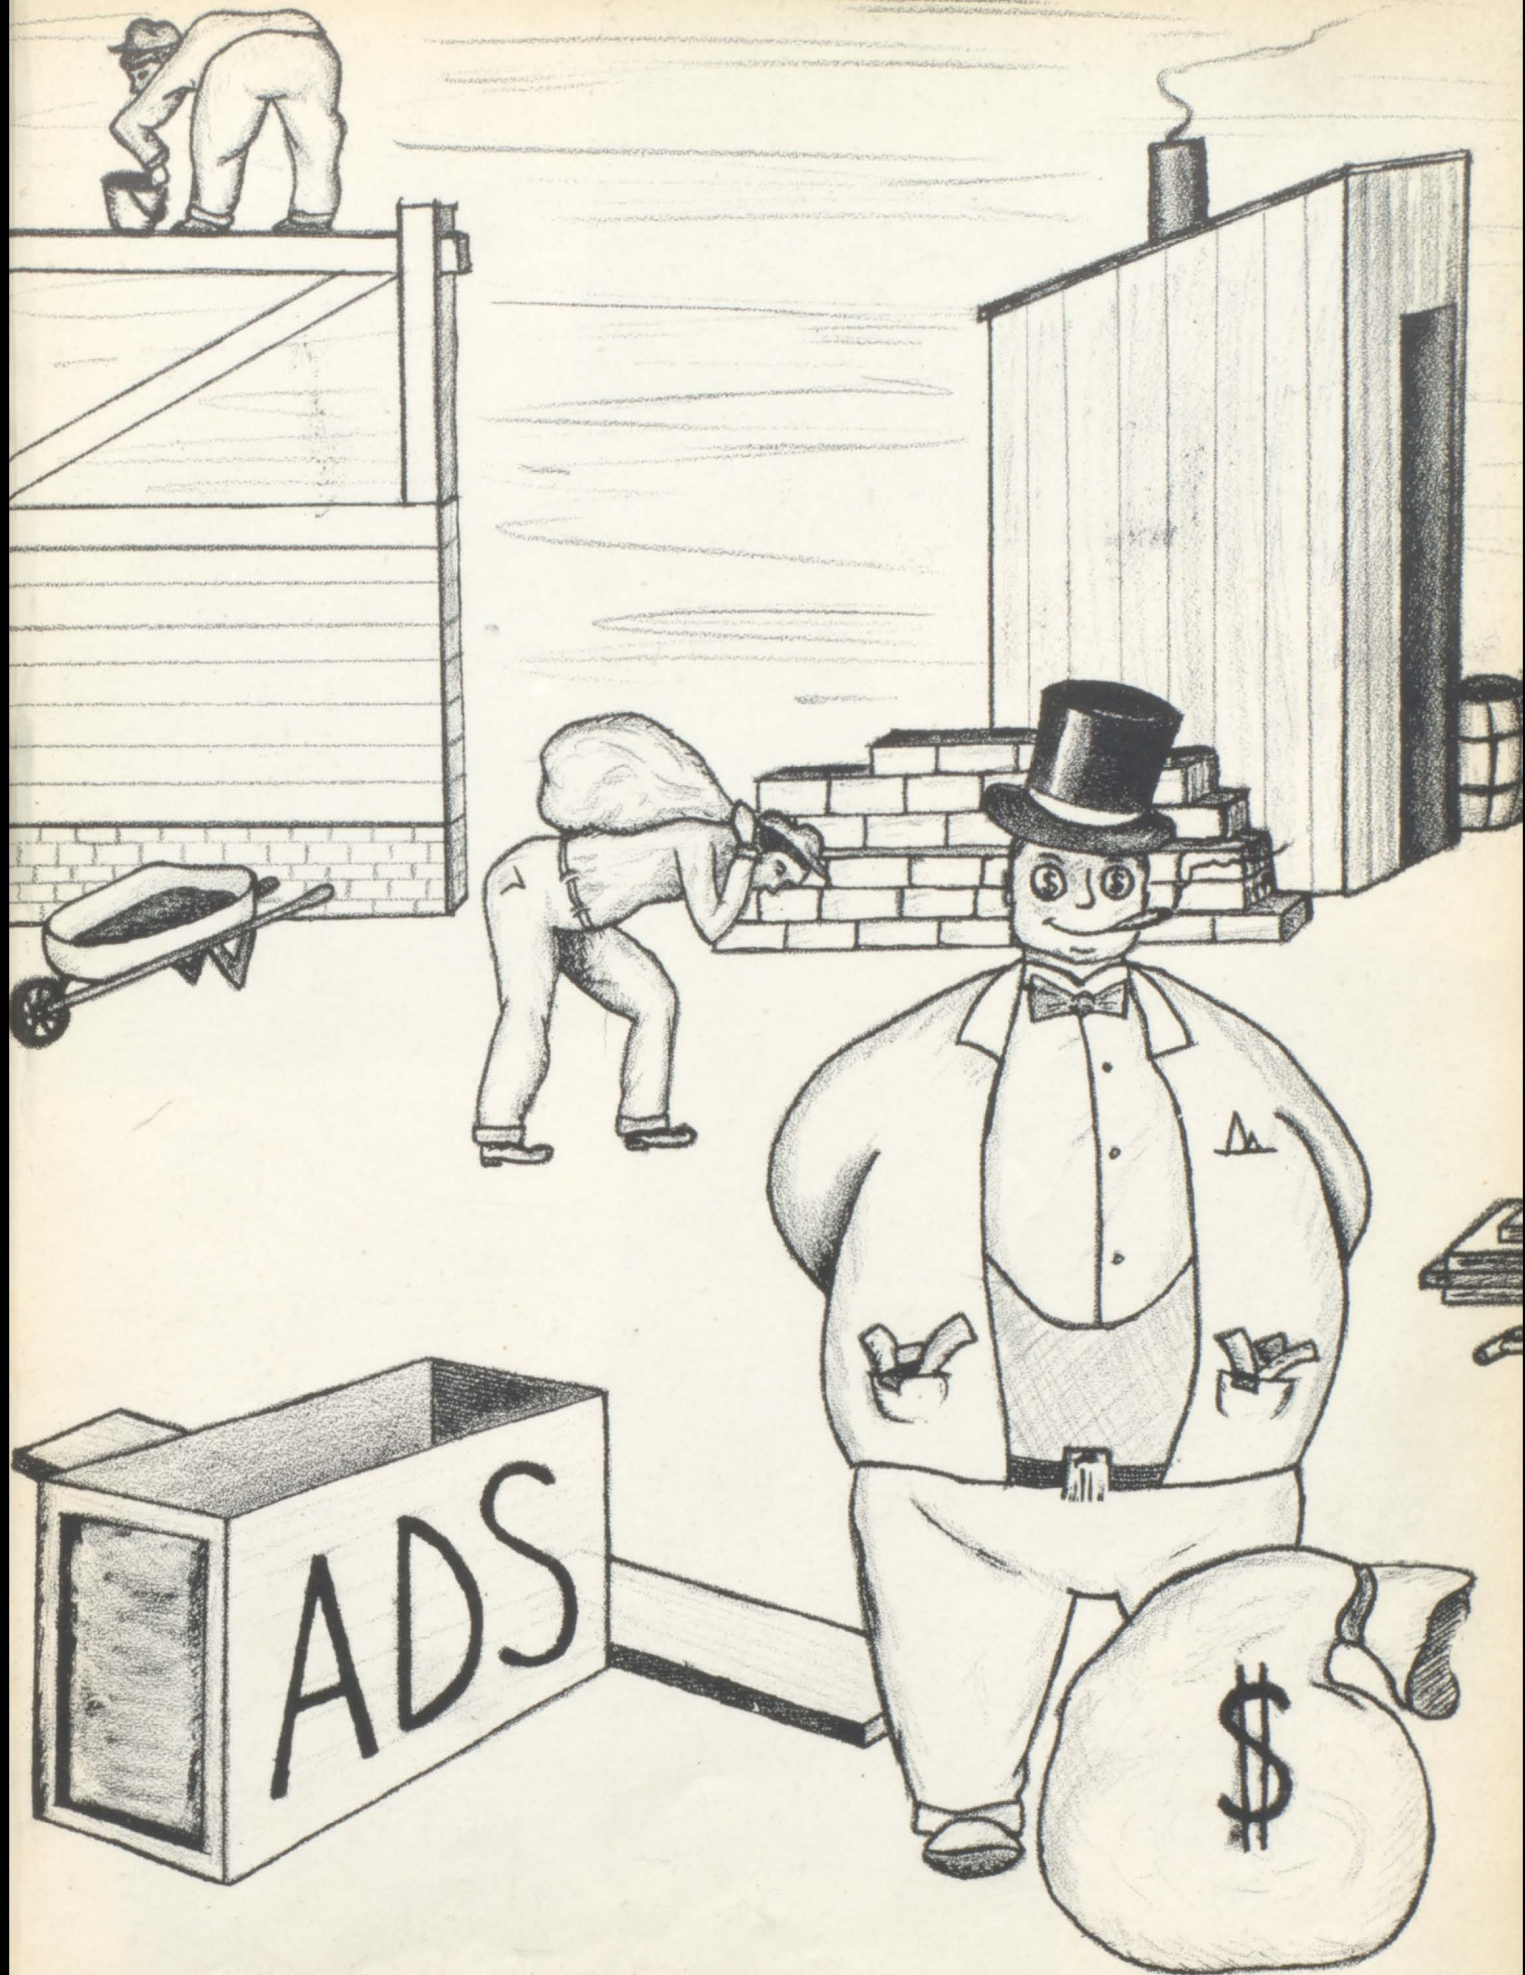

Marlene Adams, Joan Finkelson, Hanna Fleischman, Paula Katz, Barbara Miller, Constance Seaman, and Joan Widerkehr.
